Dear Nicholas Bair:

Congratulations on your recent certification! You can be proud of the hard work and determination that it undoubtedly took to reach your goal.

Before opening the envelope containing your Microsoft Certified Professional certificate, please read the enclosed Microsoft Certified Professional Program Agreement. Breaking the envelope seal indicates that you have accepted the terms and conditions of the MCP Program Agreement. Your Microsoft Certified Professional Welcome Kit contains the following:

- Microsoft Certified Professional certificate
- Microsoft Certified Professional lapel pin
- Microsoft Certified Professional wallet card
- Microsoft Certified Professional Program Agreement and Logo Guidelines

In addition, the following benefits are available through the MCP secured Web site (<http://www.microsoft.com/traincert/mcp/mcpsecure.asp>):

- Microsoft Certified Professional logo for your certification
- Access to various offers and discounts from selected companies
- Microsoft Certified Professional official transcript

As a Microsoft Certified Professional, you are recognized and promoted by Microsoft as an expert with the technical skills needed to design, implement, and support solutions with Microsoft products. The logos you may download from the MCP secured site will help you show clients at-a-glance that you are certified. Your MCP official transcript, which you may also download from the MCP secured site, lists the exam(s) you have passed and validates your technical expertise with specific products. Please review the personal information on your transcript and verify its accuracy. To make corrections or changes to your personal information, please use the Profile Editor in the MCP secured site. It's also a good idea to verify your personal data with Prometric or VUE when you register for your next MCP exam.

The MCP NewsFlash, a monthly e-newsletter, is sent automatically to all MCPs who have current e-mail addresses on record. The MCP NewsFlash delivers MCP program changes and announcements; invitations to beta exams to qualified candidates; special promotions; and more. If your subscription does not begin automatically, you may subscribe online: <http://www.microsoft.com/traincert/newsletters/>

For the latest information about the MCP program, please visit the Microsoft Training and Certification Web site: <http://www.microsoft.com/traincert>. For a list of Microsoft Regional Education Service Centers, please see: <http://www.microsoft.com/traincert/worldwide/>

We look forward to helping you succeed as a Microsoft Certified Professional!

Sincerely,
Anne Marie McSweeney
